A LANDMARK IN JOURNALISM PASSES FROM WORK TO REWARD.

Few newspaper readers are unfamiliar with the writings of "Savoyard" whose letters for many years have borne the Washington date line, and there are none of the readers of "Savoyard" who will not regret exceedingly that he had laid down his pen forever.

Eugene H. Newman was the name of the man back of the pen-name "Savoyard." He is described as one of the disciples of Henry Watterson, the noted editor of the Louisville Courier Journal. Mr. Newman is said to have first written under the direction of Mr. Watterson as an employee of the Courier Journal.

Mr. Newman was in his 78th year at the time of his death and was contributing his thrice a week articles until up to three weeks before the time of his death. It is stated the mind of Mr. Newman remained as clear as a bell to the very last, that up until the hand of death actually seized him, he was planning and preparing to begin his writing career all over again.

For over twenty-five years Mr. Newman contributed his regular three letters a week for a large number of the leading daily papers of the nation. "Savoyard" was one of the men who lived to work and right well did he do his work, judging from the large number of admiring readers he held until the very end of his long life.

AMERICANS UNITE WHEN OUTSIDE FORCES TEND TO DESTROY.

What a gloom would have been cast over this United States should the nation's chief, Warren G. Harding, have failed to weather the physical crisis through which he has just passed.

For the three years that the present executive has been in office the press from all parts of the country has been firing verbal broadsides in the shape of attack at him. He has been criticized as the golfing president and has been looked upon as a man lacking executive ability. Yet when his life is endangered every individual halts in the pursuit of business and awaits in breathless suspense the outcome. Each newspaper carries large black headlines reporting the illness of the great man. The papers and the people are united in their prayers that the president recover.

This has always been a redeeming feature of the American people. They are divided until some outside force threatens to take away some happiness, some pleasure, or destroy the law of the American people. It is then that they rise in protest or prayer. Should Mr. Harding have been unable to face the physical crisis the country would have been as grief-stricken as though a Washington, Jefferson or a Wilson had passed over the long road.

The troubles about the 18th amendment it has been in effect so long, it is threatening to stop the whiskey business; so of course many people are disturbed about it.

It is said the rum runners are complaining that prohibition laws are causing "sordid bickerings over the amount of booze in a drink." How can the booze business be made any more sordid than it always was.

The man who wins Mr. Bok's $100,000 peace prize ought to be the one who can tell how to get everything you want without a fight.

Men never look quite so wise as when they can't think what to do.

"SAVOYARD" PASSES TO THE LONG HOME AFTER A BRILLIANT JOURNALISTIC RECORD.

The death of Eugene H. Newman, Washington political writer for nearly a half century, marks the passing of a brilliant pen, trenchant, forceful, at times bitter, but never crude. He was of the Watterson school; indeed, his first newspaper work on a large scale was done for the Louisville Courier-Journal under "Marse Henry" when that newspaper was in full flower and fighting the battles of Reconstruction days. Later on, Eugene Newman began writing for a chain of newspapers. Under the nom de plume "Savoyard" his remarkable political, historical and economic letters have appeared regularly on The News' editorial page for many years.

With a mind stored with historical data and master of American political events—for the last half century through intimate personal contact with the makers of history—Savoyard in addition had remarkable powers of expression and communication. Up to the very last his mind was keenly alive. He died almost in harness. Three weeks ago his private secretary wrote almost apologetically—doubtless reflecting the mood of his employer—that temporary illness would prevent further letters until Mr. Newman recovered. A mere 78 years meant little or nothing to this dean of correspondents. He thought of that vast clientele that would be wanting him back again—that would be missing him sorely. For much more than a quarter-century he had been writing three letters a week. It takes a mind of almost infinite reach to carry that program through. But Savoyard was no ordinary man.—Birmingham News.

Those who make distinctions are sure never to reach high distinction.

There are just two kinds of people in our world—those who serve in order to live and those who live to serve.

One trouble about the tractor for drawing a plow, unlike the mule it cannot help the plowman think as to which way the plow ought to go.

When "personal freedom" becomes to mean a big opportunity to do right instead of what it now means, the millenium dawn will have arrived.

A combination of thrift and deceit—the man who is figuring on making his late summer suit look like a brand new one, next spring.

There is one kind of prohibition that has always been a success—the kind individuals took for themselves.

To put the matter plainly those who oppose a family of nations, such as Wilson proposed believe it is easier to handle enemies than friends.

People are often heard to say, let the other fellow worry over what my debt to him is; and the very same people will condemn Germany for practicing such ideas on the French.

Prohibitionists will next be blamed for the low price of wheat on the ground they caused the rye patches to be planted in wheat.

As quick as the President is out of danger some coarse American will say he went to Alaska to see if the territory were sufficiently Republican to justify his party in supporting the statehood aspirations of our most northern province.

Senator M. Johnson will never get along with the newspaper people now that he has defied them by saying he don't care what they say about him. Besides Mangus was doubtless talking through his hat.

Some of the pleasure of wearing new Palm Beach suits now, and all of the pleasure of wearing new straw hats now, is taken away by the disquieting thought that the other fellow saw in the window just what you gave for your new raiment.

The problem of the editor of a small daily paper is in some respects more difficult than those of the editors of big papers. Often he is criticised for failure to discuss editorially this, that or the other by some, when they fail to fully appreciate the fact that news is what the greatest number of people want and it is his first duty to supply this, and if he fails in this particular his paper is read by comparatively few.

FARM NOTES By J. C. Ford, County Agent

LATE CULTIVATION OF COTTON
Keep cultivating cotton till the first bolts begin to open. That is one of the most effective means of fighting the boll weevil. If the top of the ground is freshly stirred and hot, the grubs in the fallen squares are killed in large numbers. Grassy middles afford great protection to the grubs in the squares.

Nitrate For Late Corn
Late corn, on the very best of land, will pay handsomely for 50 to 100 pounds of nitrate of soda per acre. Nitrate of soda hastens maturity and largely increases the yield. If we have an early frost, some of this late corn, if unsold, may be caught. Morgan County has a small acreage in

Terracing and Drainage
This is a good time to study the terracing and drainage needs of your farm. Note the places that show more or less washing, and estimate the damage to your crop. Study the wet lands and calculate the losses at that point. We must make improvements in both these respects.

Dinner At Lyons Friday Evening

The Kiwanis club weekly dinner will be given at the Lyons Hotel Friday evening at 7 o'clock, when that organization will have the honor of entertaining Senator Underwood.

Earth's Most Favored Archipelago

THE Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce of the United States Department of Commerce has just issued an admirable commercial and industrial handbook on the Dutch East Indies and British Malaya, prepared by John A. Fowler, Trade Commissioner of the Bureau. The most casual study of its pages gives the reader a very vivid impression of the extraordinary variety and richness of the resources of these Dutch East India islands. As is well known there is in this favored archipelago a very considerable production of rubber and petroleum, but these are single items only in a long list of agricultural and mining products which the world receives from this teeming Dutch colony.

Nearly half a million acres in Java alone are devoted to the production of sugar and that island ranks third among the sugar producers of the world, supplying mainly the markets of Japan, Calcutta, Great Britain, and Hongkong, although, when market conditions are favorable, much Java sugar comes to America. In addition to sugar plantations, 358,000 acres of coffee are grown and there are 232,813 acres of tea under cultivation.

Government Agricultural Aid
In the production of these three products the planters of the islands have been ably assisted by the work of the Dutch Agricultural Information Service. New types of coffee, especially "Liberia" and "Robusta," have been introduced as a result of experiments conducted under government control, and the export of coffee developed until it reached a total of 266,000,000 pounds in 1919. The tea industry also has profited greatly from the establishment of a government tea experimental garden and laboratory where scientific investigations are conducted.

Quinine is another important product which the wise initiative of the government introduced into the Dutch East Indies from Peru as long ago as 1852. The soil and climate in western Java have been found to be very favorable for the cultivation of the cinchona tree, and in 1919 there were 131 private cinchona plantations—five in Sumatra and the remainder in Java. Cinchona "gardens" are planted in terraces on the steep slopes of the mountains.

Important Source of Vegetable Oils.
Sumatra leaf tobacco is a favorite wrapper in the United States and commands a high price, while European markets absorb large amounts of both Java and Sumatra tobacco.

The islands are also an important source of supply for vegetable oils. Most important is coconut oil, but the list of oil-bearing seeds includes as well soya beans, kapok seeds, castor beans, and peanuts.

Ten to fifteen thousand metric tons of kapok, or tree cotton, are annually exported to be used for mattresses, life belts, bandages, for the manufacture of felt hats and in gun cotton factories. Java kapok is so buoyant that it will carry nearly thirty times its own weight in the water. There are 134 kapok estates in the Netherlands East Indies. This colony long ago won the name of the "spice islands." Three-fourths of the world's pepper is produced there, but the list of spices, besides black and white pepper, also includes chili pepper, nutmegs and mace, cloves, cinnamon bark, cardamoms, and arica nuts. To these products may be added the medicinal plants cinchona and coca leaves, and a great variety of essential oils, such as citronella, cajuput, patchouli, and camanga oil, with lemon grass oil and palmarosa oil.

This varied record of the products of these rich islands can be continued with a reference to the fibres, cotton, sisal, hemp and coir, or coconut fibre, and to such forest products as rattan, and copal and damar, which are used in the manufacture of varnishes.

Rich in Mineral Deposits
In mining, as in agriculture, the Dutch East Indies have long enjoyed the benefits of scientific governmental development and control. The most important minerals are tin, coal and petroleum, although there are also certain iron deposits. Moreover, lead, copper, manganese and tungsten are found and diamonds are mined in South and East Borneo.

Coal production in 1920 was 973,484 metric tons, and the government is now operating three mines, two in Sumatra and one on the small island of Poeloe Loeet, off the south coast of Borneo.

Gold and silver to the value of nearly $3,000,000 were produced in 1918. Other minerals found in small amounts are antimony, arsenic, bismuth, chromium, mercury, molybdenite, nickel and platinum.

Amusements

"The Hunch," starring Gareth Hughes, which is announced by the Princess theater today is a screen adaptation of a story of Percival Wilde that appeared in the Popular magazine.

The supporting cast contains three who have starred in their own right. Ethel Grandin, who headed her own company before her retirement several years ago, returns to the screen as the heroine, Gale Henry, who used to produce her own comedies, is cast in a character role, and Edward Plank, known in vaudeville and on the screen for his "Hallroom Boys" act, appears as the young broker's mystified comrade.

WINIFRED BLACK WRITES ABOUT Duties of a Friend

(Copyright, 1923, by Newspaper Feature Service, Inc.)

"I take his part when he is wrong,
I see him through unto the end,
I listen when he sings his song,
And never find his tale too long,
Because he is my friend."

I HEARD a man make a speech the other day, and he quoted the little verse and said he thought it expressed one of the finest sentiments in the world.

And everybody applauded, and some smiled and some sighed, and some even shed a sentimental tear or so.

But I didn't sigh, and I didn't cry, and I didn't smile, and I didn't applaud.

What I wanted to do was to rise and tell him that he was wrong, all wrong, from the beginning to the end, all through and up and down the middle.

Where Friendship Shows

"I see him through unto the end"—amen to that.

"I listen when he sings his song"—yes, that I do, too, no matter how much he sings of the key.

"And never find his tale too long"—with that, too, I agree.

Bored I might be, tired to death I probably should be, but listen I would—no matter how he stammered and hesitated and said, "It was on Tuesday; no, Wednesday," or "I was wearing my black hat; no, I had changed to the straw"—yes, I'd listen and pretend to be interested—because he was my friend.

But "take his part when he is wrong"—that's where I draw the line, and that's where I want every true friend of mine to draw the line, too!

I don't want any one to take my part when I am wrong. I want those who really love me to tell me when I'm making a mistake, and if I go right on making it in spite of what they say, I want them to give me a good talking to—and avoid me till I get some sense into my head.

That's the only way I'll ever know when I really am wrong.

Any fool, any flatterer, any sycophant, any time-server, any schemer can take your part when you are wrong.

Any one who wants to borrow money of you, any one who wants to be invited to your party, any one who has something to gain that he ought not to want to gain, can take your part when you are wrong and he knows you're wrong. Yes, even when he knows you know he knows it.

It takes a real friend and a real man and a real woman to tell you that you're wrong and refuse to take your part.

Why should I help my friend in his folly? Why should I drive him further into mistakes? Why should I countenance him at the time of his blunder—nine chances in ten he'll repent of the whole thing, anyhow, and blame me for failing to warn him.

Only Truth Will Help

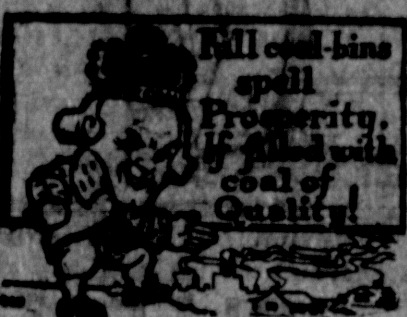

I might agree with anything an irresponsible stranger says—what's the use of irritating him, it's easier to be agreeable and insincere—what is he to me or I to him that I should put myself out telling him exactly what I think of him?

But my friend—ah, that's a different matter! Friendship is something entirely too fine and too rare to mar with insincerity and shallow acquiescence.

Take my part when I'm right. O friend of my heart, even if I'm unpopular and indiscreet and lacking in judgment! Take my part when I am right, even to the very caution's mouth, if you are really a true friend of mine.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., August 2.—Work on the new Simpson School building at a cost of $40,000, is under way and officials declare that the construction will be well near completed by September 1.

The school this fall will be enlarged with added faculty members, according to Prof. J. L. Malone, principal.

ATHENS, Ala., August 1.—Plans for the opening of the Athens College for Women are already well underway and improvements on the campus and buildings are taking place.

Dr. B. B. Glasgow, president of the institution, states that several new features will be announced for the coming school year in student activities and class work.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., August 2.—Possibility over the likelihood of Montgomery getting the Alabama-Louisiana State football game for 1923 lies hanging according to those interested in sports here.

Montgomery is said to be the favored place for the staging of the game. Alabama in favor and Coach Mike Donohue and L. S. U. said to be of the same opinion.

Difficulty over settlement of the late of play to avoid interference with other scheduled games in the state is said to be the hitch in the way.

COMMITTEES PLAN DETAILS OF CIRCUS

The production committee of the Shrine circus, which opens next Tuesday night, held a get-together meeting in the Chamber of Commerce rooms in Albany last night and the amount of pep and enthusiasm shown was a surprise to the representatives of the Morton circus, who were present. President Thomas A. Bowles, of the Shrine club, presided, and stated the reasons of the club for bringing the circus here; he also mentioned the communications he had received from Shrine potentates recommending the Morton organization, all of whom spoke highly of the exhibition and their business dealings with Bob Morton generally.

Final details in connection with the circus were worked out and committees completed; there was also entertainment and refreshments. Many members of the Masonic fraternity of this vicinity were present, also a coterie of ladies who are interested in the success of the circus, and who have volunteered their services in furtherance of the work next week.

Assistant circus director Frank M. Vernon instructed the Nobles in their coming duties, and thanked everyone present for the co-operation he had received. Chairman of the advertising committee W. W. Rahm impressed his committee with the importance of their work, and picked ten Nobles to help him complete his work. W. E. POLLY AND HER PALS

SPORTS

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., August 2—There's a song about "ginger and pep" and other lines of snappy effect. The fans all over the Southern league loop are singing such phrases to "Stuffy" Stewart, fighting little second sacker of the Birmingham Barons and manager of the same club.

Stuffy took a cellarward-bound bunch of ball players, unable to win for losing two months ago. Joe Dunn, manager of the club during the early days of the season couldn't get them to produce. When the pitchers were right, the outfielders and infielders and others were all indifferent. When the pitchers were wrong, the outfielders and infielders were right, the pitchers were wrong. That was the way things were going with Manager Dunn in charge. When the pitchers were going good, the comrades of his own could score a single run to win. And vice-versa.

Then Stewart stepped into the managerial reins. He threw sand in reckless fashion around the keystone when he was peeved. At other times he threw it in glee. He had the "old

NEW MARKET HAS

WHOLESALE THEFTS

(By Associated Press)
HUNTSVILLE, Ala., August 2—Burglars operated by wholesale in New Market last night entering seven places of business including the post-office, and obtaining loot the value of which is not known.

The knob on the postoffice safe was knocked off, but the safe was not entered. The same thing happened in J. M. Payne's store. The cash register in W. M. Gorman's store was robbed of $15 and two safes in Cochran's general store were rifled. Considerable money and liberty bonds were obtained. Registered liberty bonds were left strewn on the floor.

Latham's drug store, Latham and Reedy's garage and Ormon and Herford's store were also entered.

The town bank was not molested. Gurley, having been looted on the previous night, it is believed by authorities an organized band of thieves has come into the section.

Demonstration
Agent Is Visitor

An enthusiastic advocate of the value of home demonstration departments for the farm people visited the Twin Cities early this morning, Miss Ila D. Griffin, of Athens, for four years home demonstration agent for Limestone County.

Miss Griffin is a college mate and close friend of Miss Evelyn Peyton, home demonstration agent for six years of Madison county who is so well known here.

Miss Griffin stated that Miss Peyton had been offered a position with the state department of home demonstration work, more than once but that the Madison County farm expert preferred to remain with her own people. Miss Peyton is now in Europe.

The work headed by Miss Griffin in Limestone County is supported by board of revenue amounting to $1,600 per annum, and the state pays the remainder of the funds required to carry on the home demonstration work.

Miss Peyton stated she had heard Morgan County people wish to set up a farm demonstration agency and agreed that at any time she was called up she would do all within her power for the establishment of such a department in this county.

Irene Castle Fails
To Meet "Hubby"

(By Associated Press)
NEW YORK, August 2—Robert E. Treman, wealthy Ithaca man from whom Irene Castle, the dancer was reported to have obtained a decree of divorce, returned to America yesterday on the Majestic.

Newspapermen confirmed Miss Castle's statement that he was on board the vessel, but were unable to interview him concerning the statement of his former wife that they were not divorced or that if they were they might be remarried.

The dancer did not fulfill her promise to go down the bay to meet Mr. Treman.

MAGAZINE BOOSTS

TENNESSEE VALLEY

Tennessee Valley editions of the Mississippi Valley Association's Magazine, were received here this morning.

In the river appear pictures of steamers, prophetic of the time, when after the shoals obstruction is removed, large steamships will be seen along the river front here.

The picture shows dam No. 3 down the Tennessee river a few miles and it is marked "Great Power Dam"; still further down the river appears "Wilson Dam," and near this dam is a representation of the government nitrate plant. The advertisement was evidently inserted in the magazine by the local chamber of commerce with the assistance of a number of local firms. The names of the firms appear below the picture.

Many years ago the powerful Mississippi Valley Association, which over a year ago endorsed the Ford bid for Muscle Shoals, was hostile to the whole Muscle Shoals project, it was stated by a prominent banker here this morning. This banker pointed out that the Tennessee Valley had gained a strong ally in the Mississippi Valley Association.

Many Other Places In The Valley.
In addition to the display of Albany and Decatur contained in the Mississippi Valley magazine, appear a number of others, including a full double page advertisement of the city of Florence. The Florence display shows Wilson Dam as it will appear when completed. Chattanooga has a one page display to that of Albany-Decatur, and in addition Chattanooga has the back page of the magazine.

Paducah, Ky., the city located where the Tennessee River enters the Ohio has a full page advertisement in the magazine.

One of the leading articles in the magazine is entitled "Tennessee Valley coming Industrial Centre" by H. W. Loggley, Secretary-Manager Chattanooga Chamber of Commerce.

Arthur Capper, the Kansas senator who supports the Ford bid has an article in the magazine in which he says among other things: "Take care of the farm and the farm will take care of the nation."

"Facts concerning the Tennessee River" by Harold G. Fiske, Major, Corps of Engineers, U. S. Army, now in charge of developments at Muscle Shoals is the title of another interesting article.

The first article in the magazine and the one of most local interest is by J. Lee Andrews of Sheffield, on "The Tennessee Valley and its Possibilities." The magazine has two pages of editorial comment. It is published in St. Louis.

TUSCALOOSA MAN
IS SHOT TO DEATH

(By Associated Press)
TUSCALOOSA, Ala., August 2—Shot twice through the leg and once in the left eye, the last bullet passing through his head, Edward Elliott, prominent farmer of the Brookwood community, died at a local hospital shortly after being brought to this city last night.

Oscar Logins lies near death in the local hospital as a result of a bullet received in his left breast, which ranged downward through his lungs. Earnest and Sam Logins, sons of Oscar Logins, are in the Tuscaloosa county jail, charged with participation in the shooting.

Despite his serious wound, Oscar Logins has made statements to the local officers in an attempt to assume all the blame for the shooting of Elliott and free his sons of charges against them.

He says he met Elliott on the road, about a mile east of Brookwood, and accused Elliott of being a thief. The children, words which followed led to the shooting, according to Logins.

ALABAMA'S ROADS

STILL PASSABLE

(By Associated Press).
MONTGOMERY, Ala., August 2—Speeding up the work of legislation in the Alabama legislature is beginning to be voiced here and there among members of the assembly, apparently anxious for the final business of the session to be put away and the return to home and business before them.

With considerable legislation before them, however, consisting of several bills of general importance and many of local interest yet before them, little hope for adjournment before the first of September is contemplated.

A split session loomed last week when several members of the lower house voiced demand that the changes made by the code committee of the legislature, be printed and furnished the representatives, the motion being met with considerable opposition from others who said that too much time and expense would be involved.

Representative Mike Collie in a statement issued recently said that tax exemptions existed in the changes that members never thought of and urged that the house insist upon the printing of the changes, declaring that it would take little time.

Speaker Hugh D. Merrill, chairman of the code committee urged the members to have faith in the committee and accept the produce of "several long and tedious months of work that had been spent in preparing the code revisions."

Others spoke both in favor and in opposition to the resolution.

Skipper's Body Is Lashed To Wheel

(By Associated Press).
SAN DIEGO, Cal., August 2—Steering erratically in a circle off the harbor here, and failing to answer hails from other craft, the Japanese boat Fuso, fishing off East San Pedro, was overhauled by another Japanese boat and the skipper, O. Tomann, found dead at the wheel. Tomann, the only person aboard was lashed to the wheel. Physicians summoned declared the death of Tomann was due to heart trouble.

Speaker Merrill
Defends New Code

(By Associated Press).
MONTGOMERY, Ala., August 2—Declaring that the objection to the adoption of the code as revised by the recess committee is largely personal and directed at members of the code committee, rather than the code, Speaker Hugh Merrill, chairman of the code committee, this morning urged the passage of the measure.

Operatives Lunch
At R. R. Y. M. C. A.

A large number of the Cooper-Wells knitting mill operatives met at the R. R. Y. M. C. A. yesterday afternoon for a fellowship gathering when luncheon was served.

This meeting was held with a view of the possibility of making such noon day gatherings regular occurrences in the future but no definite action was taken yesterday.

For Furniture Designers.
A recent exhibition of old American furniture contained a rocking chair of the Windsor type which had a drawer under its seat. Why not popularize this idea in chairs built today for the diminutive home whose just boast, "I am easy to take care of," sometimes calls forth the answering wail, "Yes, but where shall I put my things while I do it?"

Watches Thoroughly Tested.
There are eleven tests which a watch must undergo to win the highest rating of the United States bureau of standards.

CHAPTER MEETS
Called meeting Decatur Chapter No. 88, R. A. M. tonight, at 8 p. m. All Royal Arch Masons are cordially invited to attend. A. B. Harvey, Sec'y.
